

Rewarding our Volunteers through free event entry or training

Volunteers who have made a major contribution to an event and forgone the opportunity to participate will be offered free entry to a NSWRA organised Rogaine, or a contribution to training.

Relevant volunteers will be entitled to a refund of their costs for the event entry or for training. The refund will be made by a direct deposit to the volunteer's bank account.

NSWRA will contribute up to $100 dollars to the cost of a recognised training course that is relevant to rogaining. Courses that are recognised include basic and senior first aid, remote area first aid and event management training. Any training course needs to be approved by two NSWRA committee members.

Who is eligible?

- Anyone who has completed one of the following roles: event organiser, course setter, course vetter, hash house leader.
- Anyone who has given up at least one full day of their time and their opportunity to do the Rogaine.

Who is not eligible?

- Flag retrievers.
- Anyone who has assisted with administration, hash house or course setting or vetting but contributed less than 6 hours.

Following each Rogaine, the event organiser will provide to NSWRA's Volunteer Coordinator a list of people who are eligible. The Volunteer Coordinator will email those on the list thanking them for their assistance and offering them reimbursement. Details of volunteers who want a reimbursement will then be forwarded to the NSWRA treasurer. The volunteer coordinator will maintain relevant records.

Restrictions:

- The reward expires after 12 months if not used.
- The reward is not transferrable.
- Rewards can be accumulated within a 12 month period.

If eligible volunteers are overlooked in this process, they should contact NSWRA's Volunteer coordinator who will make relevant enquiries and let the volunteer know the outcome